

Case Study

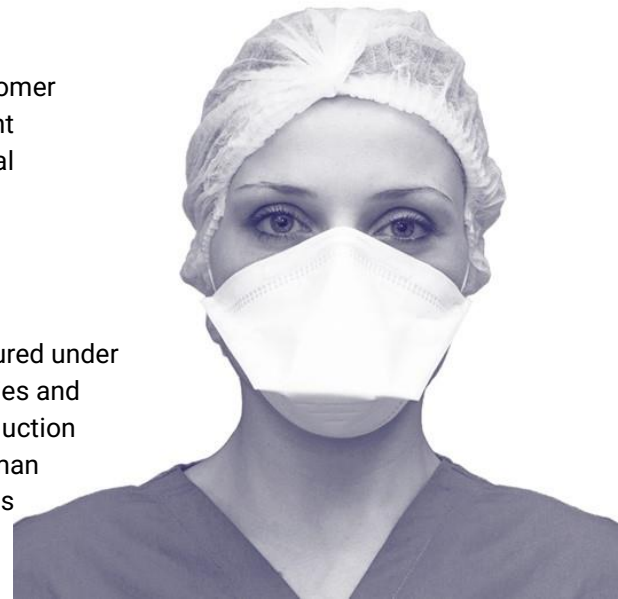

AMPri is a German distributor with almost 30 years' experience in the field of personal protective equipment as well as disposable articles for protection, care and hygiene.

Challenge

Due to the company's proximity to the market and knowledge of customer requirements, the expansion of their product range became a constant challenge. In 2006 they needed an additional regular supply of surgical and respiratory face masks to meet customer demand.

Why Irema?

It is very important to AMPri that the products they sell are manufactured under good working conditions and with environmentally friendly technologies and materials. To ensure this happens, they are in close contact with production facilities which are regularly visited and assessed by AMPri. The German company was more than happy with Irema's manufacturing conditions and contracted Irema to provide a regular monthly supply respirator and tie on and ear loop surgical masks.

Results

Today, the name AMPri is a well-established term when referring to disposable products for occupational safety, hygiene and care. For nearly 30 years the company has been offering European wholesalers an almost complete range of over 500 different disposable products for all areas of work and application, tailored to the requirements of the respective country.

"Irema Ireland is a trusted, reliable and quality driven organisation and has played a significant part in the provision of surgical and respirator masks used in the fight against Covid-19."
